For immediate Release:

Green Space Today, the premier online magazine and business resource that connects people, companies, institutions, and cities that value green building and sustainable practices, will publish a top line-up of features and columns in its January 2009 issue.

Leading Green:

Green Space Today is proud to announce that Jones Lang LaSalle (JLL), a Chicago-based, integrated financial and professional services firm specializing in real estate will be honored as our Firm of the Month in January. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency named JLL as a 2007 Energy Star Partner of the Year; JLL was recently recognized with the Sustainable Cities Award from Financial Times & Urban Land Institute and the Chairman's Award from Alliance to Save Energy.

Dan Probst, CEM, Chairman of Energy & Sustainability Services, Jones Lang LaSalle, will explain how JLL has globally applied its sustainable mission through its integrated approach to developing and managing real estate in over 700 cities and 60 countries. Green Space Today will showcase real estate developed and (or) managed by JLL that has lessened JLL's and its clients' carbon footprint through the reduction of harmful greenhouse gas emissions.

Also in our "Leading Green" section, Green Space Today will publish an article written by Dian Sourelis, Partner, BRAINFOREST, about Creative Pitch, a non-profit-organization that helps design and advertising studios recycle and re-distribute unused art supplies for elementary school children.
